UBUD, BRIEFT STORY

Historically, the Balinese village of Ubud can trace its roots to as far back as the 8th century. It is documented on ancient palm leaf scripts that a revered holy man from India by the name of Rsi Markandeya embarked on a spiritual journey across Java and eventually came to the island of Bali to spread the teachings of Hinduism. It was on his travels that he received a divine revelation that in Bali he was to bury five precious metals on a mountain slope where the mother temple of Besakih now stands today. Along with a group of followers, Rsi Markandeya was magnetically attracted to a destination located in the central foothills of the island that radiated light and energy. This place was Campuhan in Ubud at a junction in the Oos River and it was here that he felt compelled to build a temple by the name of Pura Gunung Lebah. On subsequent expeditions around Bali, Rsi Markandeya built a number of other significant temples and created a shared irrigation system for the terraced landscape that is still practiced by farmers today. The formation of the banjar, which is a village council responsible for community and religious affairs, was also inspired by this holy man. In essence, it can be said that Rsi Markandeya is responsible for the foundation of Balinese Hinduism in its purest form referred to as Agama Tirta or the religion of holy water. Since being discovered backing the 8th century, the area of Campuhan has always been highly regarded by the Balinese for its immense spiritual powers.

Even the term Ubud is derived from the term ubad, meaning medicine in reference to the traditional healing properties of the array of plants that randomly grow here. Generations of Hindu worshippers have made special pilgrimages to the fork in the Oos River to mediate, bathe and collect holy water for temple ceremonies and cleansing rituals. There had always been ties between Java and Bali, but it was the disintegration of the once mighty Majapahit Kingdom in the 15th century that saw a mass exodus of nobles to Bali. A new kingdom on the island's east coast called Gelgel was consequently established and gave sanctuary to many important ruling families. They brought with them an artistic legacy and the principles of the caste system. By the 17th century Bali invariably experienced a rapid emergence of new kingdoms, including the founding of several royal houses in Ubud. However, this period also saw much conflict between the royal clans with supremacy as the ultimate goal. A prince from Klungkung was sent to create a palace in Sukawati as a centre of great power and aesthetic beauty. Artisans came from all over Bali to help in its construction and once completed many of them chose to stay. Sukawati today is a community that strongly supports all forms of artistry as well as dance and music. With the successful establishment of a reigning authority in Sukawati, palace retainers were then sent in the late 1700's to secure the area of Ubud. A pair of cousins formed rival communities in Padang Tegal and further north in the area of Taman. Following subsequent fighting between these neighbouring villages the king of Sukawati sent his brothers Tjokorde Ngurah Tabanan to Peliatan and Tjokorde Tangkeban to Sambahan to establish palaces with the notion to control these troubled areas. Despite early feudalistic struggles between the kingdoms of Peliatan and Mengwi, the two overcame their differences following a battle that is said to have involved magical powers.

Thereafter, the people of Mengwi moved to help populate Ubud and during the latter 1800's the entire area began to flourish with plentiful rice supplies and a booming economy. All of this took place in the village now known as Tanggayuda (place of battle) around 1800.

By the middle of the 19th century there was a certain anti-Dutch sentiment brewing within the kingdoms and conflict was still rife. Mengwi experienced a bitter defeat and all land was distributed between its aggressors. Several of the battles that took place were actually fuelled by the Dutch and it was an unusual time that saw opposing kingdoms suddenly form alliances. The colonizing Dutch authorities chose to start interfering with the island's politics at the beginning of the 20th century. Under the leadership of Tjokorde Gede Raka Sukawati, Ubud came to be known as a sub-regency and then much later in 1981 became a sub-district taking over the administration of 13 neighborhoods and 7 traditional villages.

The district of Ubud today encompasses all areas within the boundaries of Tegallalang, Peliatan, Mas and Kedewatan. Bali saw a significant influx of overseas visitors during the 1930's. This first wave of tourism was focused in and around Ubud due to the business confidence of Tjokorde Gede Agung Sukawati who was proficient in English and Dutch. He had established a small guest house and his older brother Tjokorde Raka Sukawati, who lived across the street, took the initiative to welcome the celebrated artist cum composer Walter Spies to Ubud to live and work. This set a trend for other foreign artists and soon the likes of Rudolf Bonnet and Willem Hofker arrived to set up easel and paint. As word of Ubud and its enchanting beauty spread, the village went on to host a circle of famous faces such as Noel Coward, Charlie Chaplain, H.G Wells and the recognized anthropologist Margaret Mead. The vision to establish a painters association was born in 1936 and saw a collaboration to form the Pita Maha between Tjokorde Gede Agung, Spies, Bonnet and several local artists. With the help of the American composer Colin McPhee, who had built a home along the stunning Sayan Ridge, the group was responsible for bringing together some of Bali's greatest artists to teach painting, dance and music to a younger generation. Ubud developed the reputation as being the cultural pulse of Bali and that image still stands today.

Museum - Ubud is become well-known by their art especially painting art. Since 1920 many foreign artist such as Walters Spies, Rudolf Bonnet came to Ubud and influenced the art in Ubud. They introduced Western techniques such as perspective and encouraged Balinese artist that become their student to venture beyond the traditional mythological subject matter and paint scene from everyday life. Now, you can see the development of Ubud painting style from time to time at the museum in Ubud. There are many painting museum in Ubud exhibit the high quality of traditional and modern art work.

Neka Museum – Located at Sanggingan. Neka museum was established in 1976 by Pande Wayan Suteja Neka better known as Pak Neka.

Pak Neka was born in 1939 in the village of Peliatan, Ubud. Luxuries were scarce in his family and from a young age Pak Neka helped his mother Ni Wayan Lunga with upbringing of his three younger siblings. He became a schoolteacher and provided a small but steady contribution to the family's need. Pak Neka was guided by his father, I Wayan Neka (1917-1980), a skilled carver member of Pitamaha, Bali's first art organization that was active from 1936-1942. I Wayan Neka was recognize for his wooden sculpture of a three-meter tall figure of the mythological "Garuda Bird" for Indonesian Pavilion at New York World Fair held in the USA in 1964. This was followed by another one for the same purpose at Expo 1970 in Osaka Japan.

The award inspired Pak Neka to think how he could help his family more effectively. As a teacher, he pondered whether to continue preparing Balinese children for the future, or to assume a more demanding commitment by getting involved with the artistic and cultural expression of Bali. He decide to give up teaching in order to help his father present his artwork, and to fulfill his dream of documenting and preserving Balinese painting.

Pak Neka started out with a small shop displaying his father's work and painting by Balinese artist. Part time teaching allowed him to save for investment. His dedicated wife Ni Gusti Made Srimin, supported his effort at Neka Gallery. In 1966 when an international hotel opened at Sanur beach Pak Neka saw foreign tourist who took Balinese painting back home. His realized the need to document and preserve Balinese art on full time basis and began collecting works.

Pak Neka sold high quality Balinese art to encourage the market and give more opportunities for artist. His choices were based on whether pieces had special qualities and portrayed feelings that were characteristic of Bali. He looked for originality of spirit and avoided works that copied those by known artist.

In 1975, Pak Neka went abroad with abroad with Dutch artist Rudolf Bonnet to expand his horizons. He visited museum in Europe where he saw fine examples of Balinese art, and decided that the same should be done in Bali. Returning home, he established the Neka Art Museum with traditionally design building to reflect a typical Balinese household compound and officially opened by then Indonesian Minister of Education and Culture, Dr. Daoed Joesoef on 7 July 1982. At this time, there were already 100 artworks in the collection

The Neka Art Museum holds a world of inspiration for visitor. Those who appreciate the value and depth of Indonesian art are fortunate that Pak Neka choose to focus his energies on art. He personally has gathered one of the finest collections and has made an important contribution to the preservation and documentation of Indonesian Art.

Transportation

TRANSPORTATION

Bali is a small island, stretching approximately 140 km from east to west and 80 km from north to south. Lying just 8 south of the equator, Bali boasts a tropical climate with just two seasons a year and an average annual temperature of around 28°C. The rich volcanic soil and healthy monsoon make this island extremely fertile with a large range of vegetation and beautiful landscapes.

To explore the countryside and most traditional village to visiting cultural activities or from traditional performances to shopping destination, taximeter is not available in Ubud area, so if you would like to organize your transportation please contact your Personal Assistant at extension 6.
